(Camden) Welcome

Officiant:

Hello everyone, and welcome to the wedding! It's been a long, long road to get here. Beatrix, Amery, today you step over the threshold and begin your married life.

My name is Camen, a close friend of Bea and Amery, and I got ordained over "email church" 5 days ago.

Here, we are accompanied by witnesses of the best kind.

To our guests*:*

You are the dearest people in Bea & Amery's lives, assembled from near and far to celebrate their union. California, Colorado, Seattle, Washington DC, Montana, New York City, and beyond.

We thank you for your love and caring; it gives the ceremony meaning. In this way, you make it more than a special moment between two people. Together, we celebrate the bonds that now unite us all as family.

(Camden) Acknowledgements

"Bea & Amery would also like to acknowledge those who could not be here today. All the Foehrs and the Maloneys, the Jendzels and the Scotts, who send their love from afar.

This gathering is only a fraction compared to the true number of people who care for this couple. If Grandpa Tom, Grandma Cayolyn, and every other Maloney could join us out here, we'd need a few more rows of seating! To the friends and family who couldn't make it, we thank you for your kindness and unconditional love. We are excited to celebrate with you in the months to come.

We'd also like to take a moment to remember those who have passed. Bea's Nonie, Diane Foehr, is in our hearts, and Amery's grandpa, John Jendzel, is here with us in humor and spirit.

Amery & Beatrix would also like to thank their families for their unconditional love and support. It means the world to them, and this wedding would not have happened without you.

And of course, a special thanks to the friends in the wedding party who are helping us organize everything today. Bridesmaids, Officiants, speakers, photographers. Yes, thank you to New Eden, all of our incredible friends who have stood by us day by day.

(Camden) The Couple

Amery and Beatrix- The artist and the stargazer. Everyone here knows them, everyone has stories to share. The childhood friends, the family who helped them grow, the parents who've been rooting for them since their very first breaths.

But this celebration wouldn't be possible if these two souls hadn't collided one fateful day in Boulder, Colorado.

So, to help tell the story, I'm honored to present one of their oldest friends; someone who set things into motion the day they met, the legendary Jasmine Szabo (Zay-boh):

(Jasmine) First Meeting

- Jasmine steps forward

I have known Amery for as long as I have been old enough to know myself. Amery was my first true friend and remains my oldest friend today. For those of you who don't know, Amery and I grew up across the street from each other. Our childhood is full of stories we wrote together. We spent long afternoons foraging in Amery's family garden to carve out a new life after we survived a mysterious shipwreck or other catastrophe. We chased the sun after school at Meeker Elementary on our bicycles. We spent snowy days baking, playing Mario party, and cuddling with fur babies who now live forever in our hearts. I could spend the next hour or two sharing many stories that made Amery and I who we are today. But I am here to share one story in particular, one that I had the privilege to be apart of, and one that gained me another amazing friend, Bea.

Amery and I went from neighbors to dorm roommates our first year of college. Our first full day at the dorms, I forgot my Boulder ID card in the room on my way out the door to work. Amery reluctantly agreed to brave the trip to the Pearl Street Mall because they love me. Little did any of us know, my forgetfulness that day was a quirk of fate, one that ended up putting Amery on the same bus as their very soon to be wife Bea.

Amery joined a group of students heading to the Pearl Street Mall and sat down next to Bea, the two began talking, and I received an excited message from Amery. "There is someone I want you to meet."

We spent move in weekend talking, laughing, and getting excited about the year to come. The connection between Bea and Amery was instant and burned so brightly, even that first weekend.

Bea, Amery, and I moved into a house together the next year. We were joined at different times by other friends including Connor and Trip. The bond between Amery and Bea only continued to strengthen. And in October of our second year, I stood at a snowy bus stop with Bea waiting to head home for the day. She told me she was thinking about giving things a go with Amery, of seeing what life they might build together.

I am so honored to stand with Bea and Amery now as they prepare to begin writing another chapter in their story. Their relationship is built on mutual respect, unconditional love, and a desire to bring out the best in one another. I can't wait to see where life takes them next.

I'll now turn it over to the wonderful Gracelyn Hill to share the chapter that led us to this one, the story of how Bea and Amery got engaged.

(Grace) The Engagement

- (Jasmine passes the microphone to Grace)

"Thank you so much Jasmine."

- *(Grace can talk about herself here and how she knows us)

It's been over eight years since that first fateful meeting. About a year of mutual pining, and seven more to build a relationship that is as weird and whimsical as the couple themselves. This wedding has been a long time coming- so how did we get here?

"Becuase these two have a habit of making things complicated, Amery and Bea had a little contest. A proposal was in the works, and whoever managed to pop the question first would "win."

When they headed off to Estes Park for their fifth anniversary, both of them knew the game was on. The perfect moment came after a long, sweaty hike up to Gem Lake. During a picturesque moment on the shore, Bea was almost able to steal the win, but Amery tricked her into poking around a nearby cave long enough to get down on one knee. The rest is history.

In the time since then, the two have packed up their lives and hauled their cats (and other, slightly less important belongings), across the country. It's been one hell of an adventure, but they've built a cozy home and found their niche in the rainy city of Seattle

(Camden) Unity Ceremony

"This certainly isn't a conventional wedding, and we're not following any sort of strict religious tradition.

However, we've put together a little ceremony to celebrate the unity between these two persons, because what's a wedding without some ritual?

Hopefully the wind cooperates and nothing catches on fire.

- Camden moves away from Candles, showing a table. Bea and Amery grab candles.

We now take these candles, and consider for a moment, all that has brought us here today. May the flames reflect your love; The warmth and comfort of the hearth, a guiding light in the darkest times, and a shared hope for a brighter tomorrow.

"Love is a choice. An effort and a promise, day in and day out, to care for one another no matter what may lie ahead. A flame can flicker and fade, or it may go out completely. But it can always be lit again.

- Amery and Bea both light their own candles, then join them together to light the core Unity candle.

This flame won't last forever- but the love between Beatrix and Amery will never be extinguished."

The I Do's

- Camden walks in front of the table. Candles likely go out.

"Now we arrive at the heart of your ceremony. The moment we've all been waiting for- other than the bit with the feasting and drinking.

Amery and Beatrix, you'll walk away from this ceremony and nothing will have changed. You'll still be the same couple, with the same plans and the same cats waiting impatiently for you back home.

Yet something will be profoundly different. This occasion officially acknowledges everything you have built, and everything that lies ahead. This marks the true beginning of your union.

Please hold hands to give your consent and vows in marriage."

- Grace takes the bouquet and holds it so that Bea & Amery can hold hands.

"Beatrix, do you take Amery to be your spouse, your best friend and love for life?"

Beatrix: I do.

"Amery, do you take Beatrix to be your wife, your best friend and love for life?"

Amery: I do.

The Vows

“You will stand by each other for every day to come. There will be days of warm sunlight, of harsh cold, and of course, many wonderful foggy mornings in between. Beatrix, Amery, how do you vow to live the rest of your married lives?

Camden moves to the side.

Bea and Amery have vows on cards/memorized.

BEATRIX:

Amery,

From this day forward, I shall stay by your side.

I share my whole life with you

My joys, my sorrows,

My dreams, my future.

I will support you when you stumble,

And lean on you when I face troubles of my own.

I promise to never take for granted

The love we have found.

You help me slow down, to see the detail and beauty in every inch of the world around me.

And when I look up at the stars, I’ll always have you, looking up with me.

I know together we will build a life worth living

- Officiant turns toward Amery as they talk.

AMERY:

Beatrix,

From this day forward, I shall stay by your side.

I share my life with you

My joys, my sorrows,

My dreams, my future.

I will support you when you stumble,

And lean on you when I face troubles of my own.

I promise to never take for granted

The love we have found.

You inspire me to face my struggles head on, and you help me realize when it's time to take a step back.

When I'm lost in a project, you bring me back down to earth.

I know together we will build a life worth living

The Ring Exchange.

- Thing of Honor has da rings. Connor walks up.

"With these vows exchanged, and promises made, we may now present the rings.

- Thing of Honor hands the rings to the couple and then steps aside.

They will serve as a physical reminder of all that has been promised on this day. Amery, Bea, if you please.

- Amery places the ring on Bea's finger, and says:

I give you this ring as a symbol of my commitment

and our connection everlasting.

- Bea places the ring on Amery's finger, and says:

I give you this ring as a symbol of my commitment

and our connection everlasting.

Officiant asks Beatrix & Amery to join hands again if they haven't already…

Blessing & Pronouncement

Before these witnesses, your friends and family, and with the endless love between you, you are now joined together in the commitment of marriage.

May you find a way through every challenge life throws at you, a solution for every problem. A key for every lock, a trick for every task.

May you find a future full of purring cats, colorful crafts, laughter, love, and endless adventures.

The Pronouncement & Kiss

By the power vested in me by the States of Washington and Colorado, I now pronounce you married. You may kiss!

- Beatrix & Amery kiss (three mississippi), guests applaud.

The Presentation

I present to you our newlyweds Beatrix & Amery Jendzel-Foehr!

- If there is a bouquet, Beatrix is handed the bouquet back for the recessional walk.

The Recessional

The wedding party recesses down the aisle in the opposite order that they arrived, led by Beatrix and Amery.

- “Figure in the Background” plays while the wedding party recesses.

Announcement

- After the wedding party has left.

Please now join our newlyweds for cocktail hour, then a nice feast of Italian and homemade soup in the forest. Have a wonderful evening everybody!
